

Notes on Contributors.

Maria Burczynska is a Lecturer in Defence Studies at the Defence Studies Department based at the Defence Academy of the United Kingdom in Shrivenham. She is a member of the RAF Museum's Research Advisory Board, an associate of the Freeman Air and Space Institute, and an editor for an online scholarly platform, From Balloons to Drones. Dr Burczynska's research interests are in the broad area of military and security studies in both, national and international dimensions. She is particularly interested in contemporary European air forces and their participation in multinational operations and initiatives as well as the influence of national culture on the military culture of individual air forces. At the moment, she is investigating the concept of Agile Combat Employment while looking at building and sustaining national resilience in the changing security context on NATO's Eastern flank, especially in Poland.

Tony Clark is the Academic Director for the Capability and Acquisition (CAPAC) programmes for the UK Defence Academy. He is a Senior lecturer in the Defence Leadership, Management and Strategic Capability Group at Cranfield Defence and Security.

Patrick Finnegan is the Deputy Director and Academic Lead for Defence and Security within the Office for Executive Education and Skills at Lincoln University. Most of Dr Finnegan's work focuses on assisting defence partners to develop their training packages. He is an Associate Editor with Perspectives on Terrorism.

An Jacobs is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Defence and International Affairs at the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst (RMAS). Previously, Dr Jacobs worked as a Political Adviser and Reporting Officer for the European Union's Rule of Law Mission EULEX in Kosovo, and as a Senior Researcher and Policy Advisor for the Center for Security Studies (CSS) in Zurich, Switzerland. She is a Senior Fellow of the UK Higher Education Academy and held lecturing roles at various European universities, including in Maastricht (NL), Manchester, and Nottingham (UK). She currently holds Visiting Fellowships with the Institute of Diplomacy and International Affairs (IDIA) at Loughborough University London, and with the School of Philosophy, Politics and Economics at the University of Reading.

Simon Keenan serves as a Commandant (OF-3) in Óglaigh na hÉireann (Irish Defence Forces) holding the appointment of Directing Staff in the Command & Staff School. His 21 years' service include operational tours with the UN and the EU and a variety of domestic command, training and staff appointments. His primary degree was a BSc in Design. He also holds an MSc with distinction in Security and Risk Management from the University of Leicester and an MA with distinction in Defence Studies from Kings College London. He was awarded The Director of Infantry Sword on completion of the Junior Command & Staff Course and is a graduate of the UK's Advanced Command & Staff Course. His research interests include military training and strategy. He has been involved in the planning, coordination and delivery of professional military education for several years.

Colin Lawlor is a Lieutenant Colonel with over 29 years of service in the Defence Forces. He has served in various command, staff and training appointments throughout the Defence

Forces, including as an instructor at the Military College's Infantry School, and Command and Staff School. His current appointment is Defence Forces Registrar, Defence Forces Headquarters Training and Education Policy Branch. His overseas postings include tours of duty with the United Nations and NATO in the Middle East, the Balkans, and Africa. He holds a BSc (Hons) from the National University of Ireland, Galway, an MA in Teaching and Learning in Higher Education from IT Carlow (2016), an MA in Leadership, Management and Defence Studies from Maynooth University (2019) and a Doctor of Education from the University of Sheffield (2022).

Augustine Meaher is an associate professor of National Security Studies at the United States Air Force's Air University. He has over fifteen years' experience in professional military education as an administrator and faculty member. His published works include The Australian Road to Singapore: The Myth of British Betrayal and numerous articles on 20th century military and diplomatic history. He is presently researching the US Army Air Forces in Northern Ireland in the Second World War. Dr. Meaher graduated cum laude from Georgetown University and received his MA in history from Tulane University. Dr. Meaher holds a doctorate in history from the University of Melbourne

Amy Mumby is completing a PhD in Management at the University of Lincoln. She is currently the Director of Executive Education and Skills and Leader of the Defence and Security cluster. Outside of the university, she is a Fellow with the Chartered Management Institute.

Anna Sofie Schønning is assistant professor at the institute of Strategy and War Studies at the Royal Danish Defence College. Schønning holds a PhD in History from the University of Roskilde and the Royal Danish Defence College. Her PhD thesis investigated the use of history in advanced officer education from 1900-2016. Dr Schønning is a researcher and lecturer specializing in the use of history, military historiography, operational learning, the history of science, and classical war theory. Furthermore, Schønning has been part of the working groups behind the Royal Danish Defence College's contribution to the Afghanistan Lessons Learned report (2016) and DIIS's independent historical commissioned inquiry of the Danish engagement in Afghanistan 2001-2021 (forthcoming).

Ian Speller is Professor of History and Head of the History Department at Maynooth University. He is also the Director of the Centre for Military History and Strategic Studies at Maynooth and is responsible for coordinating the educational partnership that exists between the university and the Irish Defence Forces. As such, he has almost thirty years of experience working in PME, including at the UK Defence Academy prior to moving to Ireland in 2003. His research interests include military history, maritime strategy and expeditionary warfare and he has published widely on these topics.

Don Thieme, Ph.D., is a retired US Marine, Olmsted Scholar, MIT Seminar XXI Fellow, graduate of the School of Advanced Warfighting and US Army War College, and teaches at the US Navy's Maritime Advanced Warfighting School. He has led dozens of staff rides in the US and Europe. All views expressed in his article are his personal ones and in no way reflect those of the US Navy, Department of Defense, or US Government.

Please note that the views expressed in this Special Edition are those of the authors alone and should not be taken to represent the view or opinion of any other group or organisation.