

CONTENTS

Editorial		p.2
Teaching Learners ‘How to Think’ not ‘What to Think:’ The MA in Leadership, Management and Defence Studies, the Command and Staff School and Professional Military Education in the Irish Defence Forces.	By David Dignam	p.4
The Joint Command and Staff Course: responding to the educational needs of senior officers in the Irish Defence Forces	By Colin Lawlor	p. 8
How Effectively is the Cadet School Able to Develop Leaders of Character?	By Conor Gorey	p.21
How Should the Irish State Respond to the Radicalisation of Irish Citizens in Support of Islamist Terrorism?	By Niall McCorry	p.60
Do Words Really Never Harm Us? An Exploration of the Relationship between Stereotypes, Linguistic Bias and Gender Inequalities in the Irish Naval Service	By Elaine Moloney	p.94
How Does NATO Apply Instruments of Power as it Prepares for the Possibility of Conventional Warfare Against a Peer Adversary? Applying a ‘DIMEFIL’ analysis.	By Ronald Ti	p.133
All Vision No Substance; are unmet Expectations a Key Factor in the Voluntary Turnover and Discharge of Enlisted Personnel in the Naval Service?	By Anthony O’Regan	p.150
Notes on Contributors		p.181